TWO NEW FINDS REPORTED FROM CAMP ROYSTON

Royston cannot be held back as a coming great silver-gold producing section, if reports given out daily by prominent local mining men and prospectors are to be given credence. News of two most promising strikes of high-grade ore reached Tonopah this morning, which will have much to do with bringing the attention of mining men to the possibilities of the district.

Kimball & Smedley, controlling 500 feet of ground at the south end of the C. O. D. claim, have uncovered 2 feet of high-grade ore in the trenching that has been in progress for the last several days, and those operating in the district were offering to wager almost any sum of money last night that the ore would carry values of not less than $500 a ton.

Kimball and associates, leasing on the 1 Guess claim, are officially reported as having uncovered ore of a high grade in two different places, the streaks varying from a few inches to 2 feet in width. It is known that assays had upon average samples taken from both prospect workings show values averaging around $100 a ton.

The district continues to teem with activity, and while development is being carried forward through the leasing system, with extremely low royalty rates prevailing, the ultimate outcome means that if there is anything worth while to be found, Royston will quickly become the most popular mining camp in the state.

CATTLE PRICES ARE STEADILY ADVANCING

Stockmen of central Nevada are beginning to feel the effect of the war finance corporation's plan to relieve the financial stress of the stockman and rancher and prices for feeder stock have increased with a much heavier demand, according to Vernon Metcalf, secretary of the Nevada Livestock association, who has returned from a trip to Austin and Eureka where meetings of stockmen were held.

"Nevada stockmen have not taken much of the war finance corporation's funds," he said, "but cattle-men in adjacent states have, and this loosened up the market, created a demand and raised prices. Consequently the Nevada stockmen, who were not in as bad a financial condition as the men in other states, are reaping the benefit as feeder cattle are wanted and buyers from other states are willing to bid the prices up."

"The publicity attendant to the announcement of the plan of the war finance corporation put thousands of dollars into the pockets of Nevada cattlemen, because it served to open up the market and made prices better. There are many buyers in Nevada now buying feeders but the number of cattle in the state is not nearly at normal."

BEAUTY AND BECOMINGNESS IN HATS FOR WINTER

OF ALL the charming things about fall hats the most charming is their untiring becomingness. It is easy to meet the demand of the old millinery adage which says that one should look better with a hat on than without it, for creators of millinery styles have studied shapes and the development of hats from the standpoint of lines. In many new models the shapes are so managed that the finished hat may follow it exactly without being severe because the frame maker has kept in mind that the frame itself must be becoming.

So far hats are mostly medium in size, with brims growing wider. Few of them can be classed as simple either in shape or making, for they are the work of professionals who seem to be striving to show just how well they can do. Plain and panne velvet, hatter's plush, duvetyne and combinations of these materials are in universal demand for daytime hats.

A little study of the five hats pictured here will disclose one representative from five distinctly different styles and the predominance of black.

In autumn millinery, the hat at the upper left of the group has a wide brim flaring up at the front and a soft crown and is made of black velvet with a drapery of fine lace about the brim. A single large flower—milliner's whim, possibly—of ribbon is pinned against the crown at the right side.

The beautiful fuchsia shades are represented in the softly draped velvet hat in purple at the right. Two-toned quills of satin ribbon in purple and fuchsia red provide its trimming.

A good hat for service appears at the left made of ester duvetyne and loops of satin ribbon with a big steel pin thrust through the front. Next it is a Napoleon in black panne with bead and lace trimming and another all-black hat features a wide bow of moire ribbon and a jet coronet across the front. Its brim is split at the right side where it widens.

HORN SILVER IS SUPPORTED BY LETSON BALLIET

Letson Balliet, well-known consulting engineer, has placed his stamp of approval on the Hornsilver district, as is evidenced from the following letter addressed to J. M. Fenwick, Tonopah mining man, who is widely known throughout southern Nevada.

"In compliance with your request for my opinion of the Hornsilver district, since my recent visit, I beg to submit the following:

"I had the pleasure of visiting the Hornsilver district on November 6 and of spending at least two hours underground in the Orlean mine—part of the time with A. L. D'Arcy and part of the time with his superintendent.

"I was surprised at the magnitude of the Orlean and the size of the orebodies exposed in it. I had no idea that it was anything so big. I was present when the shift fired the blast that broke into the vein on the 700 level. I took a piece of it to the top and panned it, finding it showing free gold. The Orlean is the making of a big mine.

"Furthermore, I am satisfied that it is not the only one in the Hornsilver district, for there are a number of good veins and croppings that have similar characteristics and appearance.

"The ore found is accompanied by quantities of high-grade which seems to lay in chutes while most of the ore in the veins, which are very wide, is a good grade of mill ore.

"Much shipping ore can be found, and it appears that even leasers could make money from ore that could be reached with a windlass.

"I think you are to be congratulated upon securing the five quartz claims for the Goldsmith Mining company in this district and no doubt the stockholders will be greatly pleased with your efforts."

Burglars Don't Seek the Light!

Darkness is their stock in trade. They work by stealth—unheard and unseen—their movements cloaked in secrecy. It's honest folks that see the light. They are the only ones who can risk it.

It's the same way in business. The merchant who is not sure of his goods does not dare to advertise. Advertising would hasten the end of his business career—put him to a test he could not meet.

The merchant who advertises, deliberately invites your inspection. He tells you about his product and then lets it stand on its own merits. You can depend on him. He knows his product is good.

That's one reason why it pays you to read the advertisements in THE BONANZA. It is through advertising that you are able to keep in touch with the good things that progressive business houses are spending their money to introduce and keep before you.

Advertisements are interesting, instructive and profitable. They throw a powerful light on the very things that concern you most. READ THEM!
